Why is Perfect Liars Club one of the most exciting shows coming to Capital Fringe this year?

- It's a local underground hit that always sells out its monthly show at The Bier Baron.
- It features local talent picked from the city's vibrant storytelling, improv, and standup scenes.
- It's participatory – the audience gets to interrogate the storytellers and vote on the identity of the liar.
- It's very “Washington” – our audiences are sharp, competitive, and oh so eager to catch our storytellers in a lie. Maybe a little too eager.
- And there will be prizes. Everyone loves prizes.

About Perfect Liars Club

Originally started in 2013 by storyteller Layla McCay, Perfect Liars Club quickly became one of the city's hottest storytelling shows with its simple but unique premise: Four people tell four stories. All are captivating, but only three are true. Listen. Laugh. Suspect. Interrogate. Vote. Are you shrewd enough to spot the liar? The stories are hilarious – but the interrogation is even better: you never know what questions will be asked or what evidence will be demanded of our storytelling suspects by the audience in its determined quest to spot the liar.

When Perfect Liars Club last played Capital Fringe in 2014, it was one of the festival's surprise hits with a string of sold out shows and rave reviews. And while the show remains faithful to its crowd-pleasing formula, Perfect Liars Club returns to the 2016 festival with two new hosts and a lot more attitude. In 2015, McCay turned the show's reins over to Perfect Liars Club regulars and celebrated D.C. storytellers, Cara Foran and Pierce McManus. Under new management, Perfect Liars Club has continued to pack in the crowds at its monthly shows and the audience response to the new hosts has been overwhelmingly positive. Foran and McManus look forward to bringing Perfect Liars Club back to Capital Fringe this year.
